GRANT FUNDING

ONGOING

2022-2023 Co-Principal Investigator, National Institutes of Health, Fogarty International Center’s Adolescent HIV Prevention and Treatment Implementation Science Alliance small grant (February 2022 - February 2023), “Using Implementation Science Research to Link Stakeholders and Vulnerable AGYW

in Tanzania with HIV prevention and livelihood training”. With collaborators at UNICEF and the Muhimbili University of Health and Allied Sciences in Tanzania, we will: 1) scale up Msihana Salama, a pilot intervention that aims to reduce HIV risk behaviors of out-of-school AGYW in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania; 2) provide a sustainable linkage between livelihood/entrepreneurship stakeholders and out-of-school AGYW in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania. (Total grant: $35,009)

2021-2022 Co-Principal Investigator, National Institutes of Health, Fogarty International Center’s Adolescent HIV Prevention and Treatment Implementation Science Alliance small grant (September 2021-August 2022), “Using implementation science research to reach out-of-school, vulnerable AGYW in Tanzania with HIV prevention and livelihood training”. With collaborators at UNICEF and the Muhimbili University of Health and Allied Sciences in Tanzania, we will: 1) explore how the COVID-19 pandemic affects the livelihoods, health and HIV risk behaviors of out-of-school AGYW in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania; 2) assess potential for scaling up HIV prevention and livelihood reach to out-of-school AGYW while maintaining safety precautions for COVID-19. (Total grant: $34,997)

2021-2025 National Institutes of Health, “District of Columbia Center for AIDS Research,” (5P30, AI117970, Alan E. Greenberg, Principal Investigator, The George Washington University). Associate Director, Social and Behavioral Sciences Core. (Yamanis subaward total for 06/01/2021-05/31/2022: $9,397)

COMPLETED

2020 Co-Principal Investigator, Robert Wood Johnson Foundation IRL Health Equity Grant (through December, 2020), “The disparate impact of COVID-19 on the Latinx immigrant community in Washington, DC and Prince George’s County (PGC), MD”. We will use qualitative research to explore the social, economic, and health impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic on the Latinx immigrant community, as well as the resources that have been supportive to the community. (Total grant: $9,992)

2017-2020 Co-Principal Investigator, Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, “Resilience and Health in Immigrant Communities: An Examination of a Community Health Action Approach in Washington, DC and Prince George’s County, MD”. This interdisciplinary research partnership proposes to understand how the community action model of a Federally Qualified Health Center, La Clínica del Pueblo (LCDP), produces resilience and affects Latino immigrants’ health within two distinct policy environments, Prince George’s County, Maryland, and Washington, District of Columbia (DC). (Total grant: $350,000)

2017-2020 Principal Investigator, National Institute of Mental Health, “A Pilot Social Network Intervention to Reduce HIV and IPV among Adolescent Girls”. (R21 MH114570) This project will reach out of school adolescent girls in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania through their social networks and develop a pilot network-based HIV and IPV intervention to reduce their risk. Reaching adolescent girls through their networks may prove strategic for implementing a variety of HIV prevention strategies. (Total grant: $363,695)

2012-2018 Co-Investigator, National Institute of Mental Health, “A Multilevel Intervention to Reduce HIV Risk among Networks of Men in Tanzania” (R01 MH098690; Suzanne Maman, Principal Investigator, UNC) To determine whether men in camps randomized to receive a microfinance and health leadership intervention have a lower incidence of sexually transmitted infections and report perpetrating less physical or sexual violence against female sexual partners as compared to men in camps that were not randomized to receive the microfinance and health intervention. (Total grant: $2,693,726)

2015-2017 Principal Investigator, National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases/Emory University (PTE), “A Pilot Legal Intervention to Increase HIV Service Use among Immigrant Latino MSM” (P30AI050409). This study has two aims: 1) to examine fear of deportation among a population at high risk for HIV, Latino men who have sex with men; and 2) to pilot an innovative structural intervention combining immigration-related legal aid and peer navigation/social support for Latino immigrant sexual minorities to decrease fear of deportation and promote HIV service use. (Total grant: $214,302)

2016-2017 Consultant, Johns Hopkins University Center for AIDS Research, “Reducing HIV Vulnerability Among Adolescent and Adult Transgender Women of Color” (CFAR Scholar Grant for Faculty Development in HIV Research; Tonia Poteat, Principal Investigator). To assess structural and social determinants associated with HIV risk among African-American and Latina transgender women in Baltimore and Washington, DC. (Total grant $40,000)

2014-2016 Principal Investigator, Mentored Research Project, Fordham University HIV and Drug Abuse Prevention Research Ethics Training Institute, NIDA Training Grant 1R25DA031608-01. “Exploring the ethics of a social network intervention to reduce HIV risk among young, Tanzanian men”. This study examines the ethics of involving social networks in HIV prevention interventions. We explore the following concerns during an HIV prevention trial in Tanzania, including: voluntariness (leaders may influence members’ decisions to participate); beneficence (network characteristics may change in harmful ways and members may experience stigma and mistrust). (Total grant: $19,440)

2013-2016 Principal Investigator, District of Columbia Developmental Center for AIDS Research, “Exploratory Investigation of the Social and Geographic Context of Sexual Risk Behavior, Identity Development and Service Use among Adolescent Black MSM in DC”. This project gathers formative data regarding the social networks, service utilization and sexual risk behavior among adolescent black men who have sex with men (MSM). Our goal is to use the data gathered to inform the development of an intervention for this population, a high-risk group which has experienced the largest recent increase in HIV infections but for which there has been insufficient attention in intervention research. (Total grant: $49,712)

2012-2013 Principal Investigator, American University School of International Service Collaborative Research Awards, “Identifying HIV Prevention Strategies for Latino Sexual Minority Young Men Living in DC”. To collect formative data from a population of highly vulnerable young Latino men who have sex with men in DC. The community collaborator on this project is La Clínica del Pueblo. (Total grant: $22,392)

2010-2011 Principal Investigator (with James Moody, co-PI, Duke University Sociology), Duke Center for AIDS Research Grant, “Exploring Social Network Influences on Sexual Partnership Concurrency among Young Men in Tanzania”. (Total grant: $39,976)

2010-2011 Co-Investigator (with Suzanne Maman, PI, Health Behavior and Health Education, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill), Gillings Innovation Laboratories, Gillings School of Global Public Health. “Assessing Impact of Microfinance, Leadership Training on Young African Men”. (Total grant: $80,000)

TEACHING

Undergraduate Courses

Pandemics, Ethics and the Public Health Response (Advanced undergraduate seminar, SISU-350).

Infectious disease pandemics raise significant challenges for public health officials and policymakers. In this course students learn the pillars of public health response to pandemics, including surveillance, mitigation, and communication and then consider the most contended actions in pandemic response, including enforcement of isolation and quarantine, allocation of scarce resources, protection of health care workers and patients, research on treatments and vaccines, and global cooperation and governance. In assessing these actions, ethical dilemmas such as the common good versus individual autonomy, harms and benefits to individuals and communities, and the human right to healthcare are considered. Global case studies from HIV/AIDS, Ebola, the 1918 flu, and COVID-19 are used to discuss these issues in historical perspective. Finally, students learn theoretical and conceptual frameworks from bioethics, human rights, and public health to imagine more just and equitable pandemic responses. Enrollment: 2021 fall (n=22).

Global Health Interventions (formerly called Health in Developing Countries) (Advanced undergraduate seminar, SISU-349). Exposes students to the contemporary issues and controversies in global health through an interdisciplinary perspective. Students examine the major determinants of global health problems using a social justice, public health and human rights lens; explore solutions to these problems through interventions; and learn how to identify core program components through a logic model. Enrollment: 2012 spring (n=11); 2013 spring (n=19); 2014 spring (n=23); 2015 fall (n=25); 2017 fall (n=26); 2018 fall (n=24); 2019 fall (n=25); 2020 fall (n=25).

Environmental Sustainability and Global Health (Gateway seminar course for undergraduate students, SISU-250-001, -003). This course provides an introduction to the challenges of environmental sustainability and global health. It aims to equip students with analytical, theoretical, empirical, and normative tools to understand the scale and quality of contemporary threats to global well-being and to develop meaningful forms of response. Enrollment: 2020 fall (two half-courses with n=25 and n=24 in each half-course); 2021 fall (two half-courses with n=25 and n=24 in each half-course).

Global and Local HIV Epidemics (First-year seminar, SISU-106). Students consider the social and structural dimensions of the HIV epidemic, with a specific focus on populations living in sub-Saharan Africa and the United States. The course discusses current debates related to HIV prevention policies and the funding of HIV treatment. Enrollment: 2017 fall (n=19)

Master's Courses

Program Planning in Global Health (Graduate seminar, SIS 635.) Students write a plan for a health promotion intervention in a developing country setting, including a theoretical framework, intervention strategies, and an evaluation plan. Enrollment: 2011 fall (n=14); 2013 fall (n=22); 2014 fall (n=11); 2016 spring (n=14); 2018 spring independent study (n=1); 2019 spring (n=13)

Practicum Courses (Graduate capstone course, SIS 696). Community-Based Action Research and Policy Practicum in Immigrant Health. Students explore Latino immigrant health in the Washington, DC area, while gaining job-ready skills in community-based action research and policy analysis. Students created the following deliverables for a community-based client: 1) qualitative research on Latino immigrants' resilience and health; 2) a policy analysis of the lack of Spanish-speaking primary care providers in a high-density Latino immigrant county. Enrollment: 2019 spring (n = 11); 2021 spring (n=10).

COVID-19 Response in the Latinx Community (SIS 793-007). Students are exploring how the COVID-19 pandemic has affected Latinx immigrants in the Washington, DC area, while gaining job-ready skills in qualitative research and policy analysis. Students created the following deliverables for a community-based client: 1) qualitative interviews and data analysis on the affects of the pandemic on Latinx immigrants' lives, across social, economic and health domains; 2) a policy analysis of the how COVID-19 has affected Latinx immigrants in Washington, DC and Prince George's County and what community health workers can do to reach the community. Enrollment: 2020 summer (n=10).

Participatory program evaluation of a girls' health and livelihood intervention in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania: Students in this course will evaluate an ongoing health promotion and livelihood training program for adolescent girls and young women living in informal settlements in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania. Students will travel to Tanzania and will learn and practice the Most Significant Change technique promoted by USAID. Enrollment: 2020 spring (Cancelled due to COVID-19); 2021 summer (n=15).

Public Health Response to COVID-19 for SPA Analytics and Management Institute (SAMI) (SPA 685-007, 008). This course will discuss the consequences of, and responses to, the COVID-19 pandemic from both public health and economic perspectives. On the public health side, students will learn the pillars of public health responses to pandemics, use case studies to examine different country's responses to the pandemic, and the political and historical factors that motivate them. Both units pay special attention to how the pandemic exacerbated existing health and economic inequities. Enrollment: 2020 summer (n=18); 2021 spring (n=17).

Applied Qualitative Research Methods. Trained and supervised 6 bilingual MA students to conduct and transcribe 25 in-depth interviews in Spanish with gay and transgender Latinx immigrants in DC. 2012-13.

Micropolitics of Development (Instructor, graduate seminar, SIS 636). Exposes students to the key social categories (e.g. gender, class, elites, etc.) that affect development at the local, micro or project level. Students learn practical tools to assess micropolitics during the planning and implementation stages of development projects, including qualitative research methods. Enrollment: 2012 spring (n=24)
